JERSEY JUSTICE.

An Unpublished Leaf in the Botts Tragedy.

SOME NEW AND STARTLING REVELATIONS.

How a Man Was Hanged by a False Public Opinion.

BLANCHARD SENTENCED YESTERDAY.

Oschwald, it is an undoubted fact that "Jersey jusice" has become something of a mockery of late rears in the estimation of those familiar with its administration. While it is true that a suspicion of corruption has never been fastened on any part of that nevertheless, a fact that in New Jersey, as in New York, red handed murderers possessed of wealth have been known to escape, not only the gallows, but imhas worked to a charm in New Jersey just as elsewhere Within a few years it saved two persons from the hangman's noose. They had wealth and influence. But it is very different in a case where there was neither wealth nor influence back of the unfortunate accused, but where there was same jail where Ryan and Oschwald met their fate, in anuary, 1872. In the history of Botts' case there nd which is known to not more than a dozen persons. Its publicity now, without reference to the late tragedy as to wnether injustice rather than justice was done, cannot fail to serve the cause of real justice by demonstrating the fearful imperfections of the New Jersey Code as it is now framed.

BOTTS' CRIME. Botts was hanged for the murder of General "Pet" Halsted. The facts were these;-In Newark lived a notorious cyprian named Lizzie Wilson, the widow of a New Jersey soldier slain in battle. She and Botts lived together for a time as man and wife, until his means gave out and with them passed away her regard. She took up with other men. On the morning of Sunday, July 3, 1871, Botts appeared at the house where she had rooms in South street, Newark, proke in the door and found "Pet" Haisted and Mrs. Wilson together and shot him, Ital-sted died within an hour, and Botts was arrested and only indicted for murder in the first degree. He was a charcoal dealer and had little or no lunas. Upon the trial he was defended by Messrs. Charles S. Spencer, of New York, and William B. Guild, of Newark. Spencer seemed to think that he had an easy matter on hand and assumed leadership in the defence. Had he not cleared scores of murderers in New York, and could be not save one from the clutches of a coun-cited a bitter prejudice against himself and the prisoner by advancing the then odious pica of insanity, and Botts was convicted.

SEKKING A NEW TRIAL

Application was made for a new trial on the ground that one or two of the jurors had been heard to declare that they were bound to hang Botts. The application was denied. Under the Jersey code an application for a new trial must be made before the Justice who tries the case and during the same term of court in which the case was tried. If a day after that term expires a stack of new evidence was found the Justice could not histen to argument on a motion for a new trial. The case would have to take the tedious course of application to the Chancellor. In the case of Botts new evidence was found. This was after the term of Court ended. His case was brought to the attention of the Court of Pardons.

In his behalf was presented a most formidable petition asking for a commutation of sentence. One name was lacking, without which the Court would not take action—that of the justice who tried the case. It had come to be a rigid practice not to conflict with the other courts. Nevertheless the deep interest of the Court of Pardons was exerted in Botts' case. One of the judges visited him at the jail and heard his statement. Botts complained bitterly that his New York counsel overruled him in the matter of his defence. He was strenuously opposed to the plea of insanity. The rew testimony was laid before the Court, and the result was a unsnimous informal agreement that Botts was not guity of murder in the first degree, and Otto for straining mercy, was of this view. It was agreed on all sides that Spencer, as the Herald Said after time, had "botched Botts' case." Meanwhile the day appointed for the execution arew high. The efforts of Botts' friends succeeded in getting a respite of time from Governor Randolph. A gentleman who labored zealously and intelligently for Botts, Chancelor Zaoriske, related the case of a man who by the merest chance escaped the gallows as Botts w merest chance escaped the gallows as Botts was seekting to escape it. The man had been tried and sentenced for murder in Hudson county, His time on earth had nearly expired. The courts had become practically closed to him, as were all avennes of secape. New evidence at the cleventh hour was brought to light proving clearly that the doomed man was not deserving of the death penalty. But the Court of Pardons was powerless to help him. It could but would not pardon, and would not commute. Fortunately the Legislature was then in session. A bill was drawn up giving the Court of Pardons the power to commute death sentences to imprisonment for hie. It was rushed through the Legislature just as was the Magie buil in the ltyan and Oschwald case; but, unlike the latter, was signed and not voteed by the Governor. Through it the man was spatched from under the very shadow of the gallows, and, if not dead, is still an inmate of the State Prison at Trenton. It was in this way that the Court of Pardons outstude power to commute. In the Botts case a movement was at once made to have a law passed granting power to the Supreme Court Justices to hear motions for new trials in terms of Court other than those at which cases were tried. The object was to secure Botts a new trial. Part of the evidence to be produced was indubilable proofs that the woman known as Mrs. Wilson was in reality Botts' lawfully married wife. The public meanwhile, ignorant of the true merits or facts of the case, were, with the New Jersey pross, led away with the uca that the offorts in Botts' behalf were cunning dodges.

EXYLELDING FUBLIC OFINION.

A public opinion was created so violent against the doomed man that not a single member of the Legislature could be found courageous enough to introduce the Botts bill. If introduced it would have been booted down. The new Governor, Joel Parker, declined to have anything to do with the matter, and even the Court of Pardons turned the cold shoulder, in the face of the talse public opinion. As a result no action w nim credit for the information he had given the prose-outor, which has been useful in the administration of justice in aiding in the discovery of scolen goods, and also for the evidence he gave in the recent murder case, and have taken all these circumstances in consid-eration in passing sentence. He was then sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment at hard labor in the County Penitentiary.

SERGEANT GRANGER ACQUITTED.

Some time since was published the complaint of a young woman named Margaret Kelly, who, at the Cenyoung woman named Margaret Kelly, who, at the Central Office, charged Sergeant Granger, of the steambest agong, with assaulting her. The story at the time elicitiet fonsiderable sympathy for the woman, who was apposed to be the victim of an officer's brutairty, but an investigation of the case has gone to show that it was the Sergeant who was most worthy of sympathy. Mass Kelly on being confronted with her alleged assaulant at the contral office is the contral office is the officer who did strike this woman? Can not the Commissioners flux him out and punish him as he deserves?

FATAL FIRE.

A are broke out yesterday at No. 187 Wooster street which caused a large loss of property. About $4,000 damage was sustained on the buildings and furniture. Iwo children, Hattie Brown, aged three years, and Joseph, aged fifteen months, were, it is feared, fatally brick from and occupied mainly by colored people The upper floor was occupied by Mary Brown, c nother of the burned children. When the fire are broke out in the apartment of this woman, Captain broke out in the apartment of this woman, Captain McDonoil and officers Johnson and Metter of the Prince street station thought it would not amount to much and endeavored to extinguish it. Finding, however, that the flames had gained considerable headway one of the officers was sent out to give an alarm. The Captain and his assistants at once rushed into the burning house, and groping their way through the dense volume of smoke, reached the upper floor. There, lying in the bed, with the night clothes on fire, were the two children, who had already been partially suffocated. They were rescued with difficulty and carried to the street, where a cursory examination showed that both were badly burned. The little sufferers from thence were removed to the Prince street station. and carried to the street, where a cursory examination showed that both were badly burned. The little sufferers from thence were removed to the Prince street station house and Folice Surgeon Cook summoned. The clothes had been partially burned from their bodies. The arms and head of the girl were burned very badly, but the injuries to the little boy were much more severe, the skin being burned off in patches on various parts of the body. They were transferred to the Chambers Street Hospital against the protests of their mother, who was absent at the time of the fire and only learned of their condition by a visit to the police station. The investigations made by the police and the Fire Marshal show that the fire was the result of carolessness on the part of Mrs. Brown. After building a fire of wood in the stove she swept the floor and deposited the sweepings, which contained some scraps of paper, near the stove. She then left her sleeping children and went out to visit a neighbor. The sweepings became ignited from the red hot stove, and as the building was an old wooden one the fire made rapid headway. The second floor was occupied by a Mrs. Duncan, who insisted on remaining in her rooms after the upper floor had been well enveloped in flame. She had to be lorced out by the police. The building is the property of Mrs. Walters, of Union Hill, N. J., and is supposed to be fully insured.

A BLOODLESS ENCOUNTER.

TWO OF "JOE" COBURN'S LEGAL CHAMPIONS IN PUGILISTIC ATTITUDE AT THE ASTOR

Since the arrest of Coburn a number of lawyers have been sought after by friends of the accused, and from the multiplicity of counsel retained some little jealousy has been manifested, and this feeling has particularly existed, as it would appear, between Mr. Chipman and ex-Judge Curtis. During the contest over the bail question on Friday, the one single point was gained admitted to see him in his cell in the Tombs, Both Curtis and Chipman figured prominently to this arrangement, and each was determined, apparently, that the other should have as little to say during the proceedings as possible. This feeling must have led to an acrimonious competition, which cuminated, as the facts below will show, in an encounter; bloodless, to be sure, but nevertheless an encounter; blooders, to be sure, but nevertuciess at the ounter.

During the evening following the hearing of the case, Messrs. Chipman, Curtis and two or three other gentlemen adjourned to the elegant bar of the Astor House to indulge in a sociable drink. Champagne cocktails and that delicions beverage concocted of milk and Jamaica rum were served by the gentlemanty partender without stink. It is to be presumed that all the party become considerably exhibitated; undoubtedly two of the party did.

DISCUSSING THE DEFENCE,

Of course the matter under discussion was "the case." Lawyer Chipman, who is a recent arrival here, undertook, in the course of the conversation, to vaingloriously ventiate his views on the method of defence in the approaching trial. It is to be leared that he arrogated to himself somewhat too much credit for the gaining of time from the Court. But, however this may have been, he was suddenly brought to a standstill by the belligerent attitude assumed by his legal brother, who, with a sneer of supreme disdain on his countenance, remarked that he "torked too much with his mouth," &c.

"What do you know about defences?" pertinently

"What do you know about defences?" pertinently quoried Mr. Curtis.

"I know as much as you do, anyhow," retorted Chipman.

"Why," most contemptuously, "you unknown wait from Philadelphia; you _______, you don't know anything at all. Get out of here!"

"You are a linr!" next emanated, with dramatic emphasis, from the mouth of the other lawyer.

Thereupon the trate Curtis, who is accounted something of a pugilist himself, "peeled off" his ragiin, and seizing a glass from the bar attempted to hur! it at the head of his diminutive opponent. In this he was, however, prevented by the interference of mutual friends. The wrangle lasted some time after this, but although each combatant meant no doubt the annthilation of the other, all bloodthirsty designs were summarily stopped by the vigorous action of the attachés of the place and other peacemakers.

"JOE" COBURN.

It was expected that Judge Sutherland would hear the arguments for bail in Cohurn's case yesterday afternoon, but such was not the case. The Judge was in the District Attorney's office during the day, but retused to hear any argument in the case until Tues-day morning, when, as per order of adjournment, it comes up for trial on indictment.

The second clause provides that in all matters of dispute the society shall act on the principle of arbitration, and pledges the society to avoid all strikes, which the constitution deems revolutionary in character, destructive aike to the interest of the employer and the employed, and a means which should only be resorted to when all other efforts prove ineffectual. The constitution also provides for the care of sick members and thegeneral welfare of the trade.

The constitution was adopted, and a resolution adopted, proposed by Mr. Robert Crowe, secretary of the General Committee, thanking Mr. Rosenbaum for the election of the secondary of the general was elected permanent president of the association, and an adjournment taken until the next regular meeting, when the balance of the officers will be elected.

AN EQUESTRIAN FEAT.

Mr. C. V. Hand, the gentleman who introduced mustang long distance and quick changing riding to the East last year, is about to startle the metropolis with another scheme, in which the fleetness and endurance another scheme, in which the ficetness and endurance of the prairie ponies are to be put to a fresh test. Some time in March he will attempt, at either the Hippodrome or some similar institution, to have Francisco Peralto, the famous rider, accomplish with twenty horses the difficult task of covering 600 miles in fifty consecutive hours. The hippodrome track is but one-seventh of a mile in length, and the constant circling will be apt to produce great dizziness and increase the hardship of the rider. When the racing week evenuates the contest against time will be begun on a Monday evening, at eight o'clock, and will end on the following Wednesday evening, at ten o'clock. THE WALKER CONVICTION.

THE BANK STATEMENT.

Had the business of to-day-and for the matter of that, of the past week -- been set to music, no accommer, hammer, until prices have been beaten down and tunate investors. Stocks have proved as malleable as wax under the impact of Cyclopean bears, while de-moralized bulls stand gasping as though every grain of energy, courage and vitality had been pounded out of them. To-day was but a repetition of yesterday weak, "was everything by starts and nothing long," and it brought up finally in as complicated a condition In fact, in many cases the worst showing of the day was made at the close, as the best had been made at the opening, thus in a manner imitating the story of Penclope's web by weaving a strong market in the morning and unravelling it all at night. In point of magnitude of transactions Western Union stands at the head of the list, it being credited with sales of nearly 64,000 shares. In all reason, from the agencies at work, the quotation should have advanced, but in Wall street all signs posed to do in a drought, and the quotation on the contrary felt. The agencies referred to were comprised in indications that Jay Gould was a heavy buyer, and in the fact that Mr. Garrett, of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, distinctly refuses to serve as director in the rival Atlantic and Pacific line, while Mr. Tom Scott, of the Pennsylvania road, is more than inclined to follow in his footsteps. tion of these gentlemen was sensibly felt in the market price of Atlantic and Pacific, which fell from 20% to 18%, but had no strengthening effect on Western Union, which, on the contrary, declined to 63%, and was so offered after board hours. An excited market attended the course of Lake Shore, the stock failing from 49% to 47% and rallying to 48% at the close. The Twenty-third street people were at hand, hummer and tongs, in the shape of short sales, and the Pacific Sloper helped them to the top of his bent. All the old stories were furbished up to look as good as new, and were applied with the success above oted. The party from 'Frisco was also a large buyer of the St Paul preferred shares-it was said to cover shorts-while the Osborne contingent were sellers of the same. Whatever may be the meaning of the transaction it is certain that the stock remained one of the strongest on the list, and at the close improved upon the opening prices. In connection with this roperty a report reaches us that the bill before the Wisconsin Legislature to dispossess bondholders of the right to vote at company meetings has failed to become a law, and therefore this privilege still adheres, the status quo remaining unchanged.
Pacific Mail is all at sea again. The land sighted in the shape of a $500,000 subsidy bill, and looking lovely through the atmosphere of Senatorial protection, turns out to be a barren island after all. The House Committee on Appropriations refuses to join with the Senate in recommending the subsidy, and the matter falls to the ground. Meanwhile Pacific Mail, which had made an excursion to 26 under these favorable antici-pations, returns to its moorings at 25. Much less in-terest attended the fortunes of the coal stocks; neither
